Keynote Speakers

Charles Holt

Charles Holt is the A. Willis Robertson Professor of Political Economy and outgoing Chair of Economics at the University of Virginia, where he also teaches in the Batten School of Leadership and Public Policy. Previously, he taught at Minnesota, after finishing graduate work at Carnegie-Mellon. He is the currently the director of the Experimental Economics Laboratory at Virginia and writes the software for the web-based VeconLab experiments. His publications include over a hundred articles in academic journals, focused on game theory, auctions, experimental economics, and the teaching of economics. He has written and edited several books on topics in experimental economics, and was a founding co-editor of the journal Experimental Economics. He has previously served as President of the Economic Science Association, the Southern Economic Association, and the Society of Economic Educators. Much of his current research pertains to auction design, e.g. for greenhouse gas allowances, spectrum licenses, auto license plates, and toxic banking assets. Other work in includes measures of risk aversion and studies of strategic behavior in games and bargaining, using a mix of theory and experiment.

John Pepper

John V. Pepper is a Professor of Economics at the University of Virginia. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin in 1996, and his B.A. in Quantitative Economics from Tufts University in 1987. His research focuses on how to partially identify or bound treatment effects under minimal assumptions, for example, how to evaluate the effect of job training or schooling on labor market outcomes without imposing restrictive functional form or distributional assumptions. His current applied research examines the identification problems that arise when evaluating a wide range of public policy questions including such subjects as health and disability programs, welfare policies, and drug and crime policies.
